WebHR Chooses Benefit Express' Online Benefit Administration Tool

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, IL. August 29, 2006--- Over the last six months, WebHR conducted an exhaustive investigation into online benefit tools and they have just named Benefit Express as their online benefit administration tool provider. "Benefit Express is the most flexible and the most updated system on the market," said Mr. Abbaszadeh, president of WebHR. "They have the best grasp of the business and are able to provide the best solution in what can be a very complicated service area."

Electronic web-based benefit enrollment programs first became available in 2000 as a means to streamline the process and provide employees greater access to their benefit programs. Key advantages include better reporting, greater employee empowerment, reduction of paperwork, easier plan comparison and immediate updating of information.

"Our system has been put to the test and has won time and time again. We provide a rare combination of in-depth benefits and system knowledge and we use that to create an unmatched solution that gives our customers an advantage," added Maria Bradley president of Benefit Express. "Our system is menu-driven and easy to set up which allows our clients to be self sufficient."

WebHR's 250,000 members are concentrated on the West Coast and it has a large customer base in California. "By working with Benefit Express we'll be better able to reach into new markets and all our customers will benefit," added Mr. Abbaszadeh. "The new system communicates with payroll systems to enhance accuracy and timeliness of deductions which is good for the employees that we cover and we will be able to track all the variables to meet the needs and standards of all our carriers."

Benefit Express began working with insurance companies to provide online tools two years ago and WebHR is its first account in California. The first wave of 4,500 WebHR customers will start using the system in October, 2006 and eventually all WebHR customers will migrate to the new system.
